Overview

A monitoring system flexible enough to cope with the changing rhythm of implementation and with unexpected events is essential for a market systems programme. This module looks at some of the key processes and tools required for such a monitoring system, and how an organisational culture that promotes adaptive management can be fostered and sustained.